AAAA Overview

■ 1986 WORLD HELICOPTER CHAMPIONSHIP

The U.S. is making plans to field a team at the Fifth World Helicopter Championship to be held at Ashby Castle, England, during June 22-28, 1986. LTC Bob Harry and CWO Nick Walters of USAAVNC have already visited the competition location as key U.S. representatives. Teams from France, Great Britain, West Germany, and the USSR, among others, are also expected to compete. The AAAA plans to support the U.S. Team financially with some $4,200 in carryover escrow funds from the Fourth WHC. The Helicopter Club of America (HCA) is the focal point and coordinating agency for U.S. efforts and will be assisted by the National Aeronautic Ass'n (NAA), Helicopter Ass'n International (HAI), and the Whirly Girls, as well as the AAAA.

■ 1986 HALL OF FAME INDUCTIONS

General Hamilton H. Howze, Ret., of Fort Worth, Tex., Chairman of the Army Aviation Hall of Fame Board of Trustees for the 1985-1988 period, has appointed seven members of the Hall of Fame to serve as fellow Trustees: COL E. Pearce Fleming, Jr., Ret., Columbia, S.C.; MG James F. Hamlet, Ret., Trenton, N.J.; COL John W. Marr, Ret., Arlington, Va.; MG Spurgeon Neel, San Antonio, Tex.; CW4 Michael J. Novosel, Ret., Enterprise, Ala.; GEN Robert M. Shoemaker, Belton, Tex.; and MG James C. Smith, Ret., St. Petersburg, Fla.

The eight Trustees will select a qualified list of Hall of Fame candidates at an April 9, 1986 meeting in Atlanta, Ga., during AAAA's 1986 National Convention. By mail balloting, AAAA members with seven or more years of current, continuous membership will then elect a specific number of candidates from those appearing on the ballot. Those elected will be inducted at ceremonies to be held during "AAAA Week" at Fort Rucker, Ala., in November, 1986.

■ CALL FOR PAPERS

A "Call for Professional Papers" has been made for the Third Aircraft Survivability Equipment Symposium to be co-sponsored by the AAAA and the ASE-PMO, St. Louis, Mo. The two-day classified gathering will be held during November 12-14 at the Sanders Associates' plant in Nashua, N.H. Additional details may be obtained from AAAA, ATTN: Lynn Coakley, 1 Crestwood Road, Westport, Conn. 06880.

■ FREE AAAA LONGEVITY PINS

Distinctive seven year, fifteen year, twenty year, and twenty-five year AAAA longevity lapel insignia are provided to Association members upon their attainment of each respective longevity plateau. The lapel pins are issued automatically on the basis of the initial year of membership recorded for each member, and are mailed directly to all members during December of each year.

■ ON THE WAY!

Members in the Mesa, Ariz., area have requested Chapter activation data preparatory to representing that State's entire membership as the lone Arizona Chapter.

■ NEW NATIONAL MEMBERS-AT-LARGE

Rounding out the slate of 12 National Members-at-Large serving on AAAA's National Executive Board during the 1985-1986 term ending April 12, 1986 are CPT Joseph F. McKeon, (left) of Hayes, Va., and CW4 James T. "Ted" Hall, (photo not received in time for publication) of Fort Campbell, Ky. The former is assigned to the U.S. Army Aviation Logistics School at Fort Eustis, Va., while Hall serves with the Warrant Officer Personnel Management Branch at Ft. Campbell, Ky.

The Integration of Man and Technology

The challenge: the single-pilot LHX.

It's a challenge that is being met by the Hughes Helicopters LHX team conducting man-in-the-loop simulation with the McDonnell Aircraft Company (MCAIR) LHX simulator.

Full mission simulation for the Army's LHX is now in place at MCAIR, home of the world's most advanced manned aircombat simulation facility. The unique MCAIR facility provides high-fidelity simulations of a wide variety of operational missions and scenarios encompassing countermeasures, weather, weapons, tactics and threats.

Engineers, scientists and test pilots from the Hughes Helicopters LHX team—working in conjunction with Army pilot evaluators—will appraise candidate LHX cockpit configurations having various levels of automation to determine the operational desirability of the single-pilot cockpit.

In addition to MCAIR, members of the Hughes Helicopters LHX team include Hughes Aircraft Company and Honeywell.

Developing New Ways to Maintain Our New Aircraft Systems

By MAJOR GENERAL ELLIS D. PARKER
Commanding General, U.S. Army Aviation Center and Fort Rucker, Alabama

In last month's issue of ARMY AVIATION we read of the progress being made toward modernizing our aging aircraft fleet. Part of this effort, in conjunction with the procurement of new systems, is the development of new and better ways to maintain these systems.

NDT testing

One way to improve our maintenance system would be to use a system by which we can inspect aircraft parts for flaws and fatigue without damaging those parts. Non-destructive testing (NDT) can accomplish this by the use of such techniques as x-ray, ultra-sound, and magnaflux to determine the serviceability of a part.

With the introduction of new materials, manufacturing processes, and design safety requirements, the need for a sound NDT program is becoming increasingly apparent. The fact is that the use of NDT will result in a cost savings and not an expense, as previously thought.

The application of a properly structured, adequately supported NDT process will significantly improve the Army's ability to accept safe hardware, reduce parts cost and replacement, maximize the availability of our limited weapons systems, and provide for rapid field evaluation and repair of battle damaged systems.

The U.S. Army Aviation Logistics School at Fort Eustis, Virginia, is currently reviewing the Army's NDT program and has established a study group to evaluate the possibilities of utilizing a tri-service training concept.

The need to develop an NDT program is of paramount importance if we're going to keep pace with our procurement of new aviation systems. The Aviation Branch will reap the benefits to be derived from increased design-service-life periods, time-based overhauls/condition maintenance, and a reduction in spare parts needed to maintain equipment.

CH-47D update

On 5 June 1985, the Project Manager for the CH-47 Modernization Program at the Aviation Systems Command in St. Louis released a message which explains the problem and procedures for release of the fielded fleet.

A capsulized synopsis indicates that Boeing Vertol began sending contact teams to the field in mid-June. These teams are performing fiber-optic inspections of the forward aft transmission second stage planetary bearing retainer assembly. They will insure proper installation of

Additionally, a 1,000-hour time based overhaul procedure will probably be instituted as a further precautionary measure.

OH-58 PIPS

The OH-58 product improvements to counter the loss of tail rotor effectiveness have been given top priority. Procurement of modification work orders has begun with application scheduled to begin in September, 1985, and to continue through 1988. The engine power droop correction kit and improved tail rotor have been funded for FY '85 and FY '86.

Scout OT II

The Combat Developments Experimentation Center, Fort Ord, California, has completed Operational Test II data reduction for the OH-58D scout helicopter and the Operational Testing and Evaluation Agency has provided preliminary results, although these have not been released for publication. Emerging data indicates that the aircraft meets the required operational capability. HELLFIRE and COPERHEAD results appear to have met or exceeded expectations.

MILLION HOUR MARK — The TH-55 OSAGE has passed the one million flight hour mark since coming to Fort Rucker as a primary flight trainer in May, 1973. ABOVE: Paul Schweizer (L) Vice President of Schweizer Aircraft, the TH-55 contractor, commemorated the occasion by presenting a plaque to the CG of the Aviation Center, Major General Ellis D. Parker. RIGHT: Five civilian instructor pilots who have flown the OSAGE since 1973 were also honored: (L to R) Harold Lanier, Harold Beauchesne, William Staubach, Lester Harlow, and Fred Vernon.

MILES AGES / AD: A Vital Tool for Combat Readiness

By Lieutenant Colonel
Bradford M. Brown

ABOUT THE AUTHOR

A FORMER COMMANDER OF THE 214TH ATTACK HELICOPTER BATTALION, FT. LEWIS, WASH., LT. COLONEL BRADFORD M. BROWN SERVED UNTIL RECENTLY AS THE FORSCOM NET TEAM CHIEF FOR AGES/AD. HE IS CURRENTLY ASSIGNED TO THE OFFICE OF THE DEPUTY CHIEF OF STAFF FOR RESEARCH, DEVELOPMENT AND ACQUISITION IN THE PENTAGON.

APPROXIMATELY two thirds of the divisions in the United States Army have now completed New Equipment Training (NET) for the Air Ground Engagement System/Air Defense (AGES/AD).

This new system is the latest addition to the Army's family of Multiple Integrated Laser Engagement System (MILES) equipment for aviation and air defense systems.

The basic concept of MILES involves simulating the effects of direct fire weapons using eye safe laser beams. Laser transmitters are mounted on the weapons and discrete silicon sensors on vehicles and personnel record both hits and near misses. A near-miss cue, sound or light, on the engaged soldier or vehicle, allows for evasive action before the next round is fired. This realism, known for several years by Infantry and Armor soldiers using MILES, is just now being experienced by Aviation and Air Defense Units during AGES/AD NET.

MILES technology has been expanded on the AH-1 helicopter, to include air-to-ground engagement systems. AGES on the COBRA includes laser transmitters which simulate the firing of the TOW missiles, 2.75 inch rockets, and lates the weight and dimensions of the actual tube, including the MILES STINGER gripstock.

The transmitter assembly simulates the firing of the STINGER missile by transmitting a coded laser signal. Acquisition tones are realistically simulated. The launch tube contains an ATWESS device which, if proper launch procedures are followed, ignites to simulate the flash, smoke, and sound of a missile launch.

The STINGER gunner wears a Man Worn Laser Detector (MWLD) and is vulnerable to other MILES weapon fire.

● CHAPARRAL: The CHAPARRAL laser transmitter, Combat Vehicle Kill Indicator (CVKI), and weapons effects simulator assembly all attach to a rail assembly installed at one of the missile launcher positions.

The CHAPARRAL simulator is fired in the same manner as the weapon system, using the actual controls and sight. Missile launch is simulated by the firing of an ATWESS cartridge. Laser detector belts are attached to the vehicle which make it vulnerable to attack by opposing MILES weapons.

● VULCAN: The transmitter on the VULCAN self-propelled and VULCAN (Towed) mounts on the Range-Only-Radar antenna and simulates the firing effects of the 20mm cannon by transmitting a coded laser message. For aerial targets, the VULCAN is used in the radar mode. Normal acquisition, tracking, and firing procedures must be followed. The flash, smoke, and sound of firing are simulated by the use of the AWESS or FLASHWESS. Laser detector belts are attached to the vehicle's perimeter.

The NET program

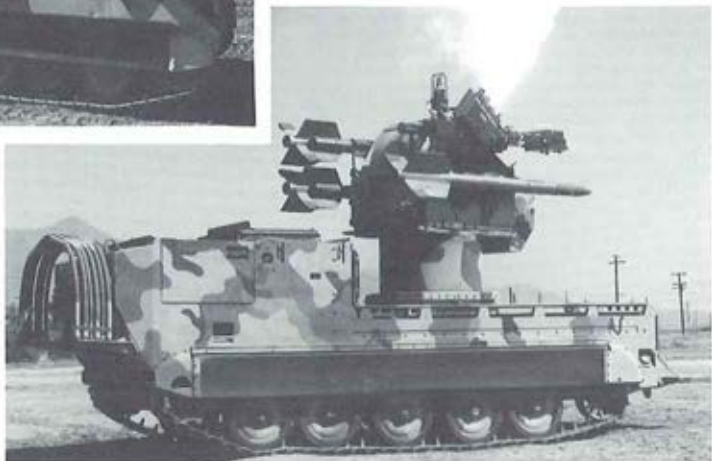

The AGES/AD NET program of instruction focuses on teaching soldiers to use MILES equipment in a force on force, free-play, combined arms field training exercise. The NET has revealed several personnel, equipment, and training readiness lessons for Aviation units which are directly related to unit combat readiness.

● Personnel: Before MILES/AGES, most aerial gunnery training occurred on the range in a sterile environment. Pilots and gunners could take their time in the engagement sequence, giving little thought to exposure time or time at risk from enemy fire. Not so during MILES training — crews must be coordinated and gunners adept in target detection, identification, acquisition, and engagement. The price of poor performance is the high probability of loss of aircraft and worse — the crew. Many crews today are weak in the basic skills of cockpit coordination and armament systems switchology, therefore, crew selection, training, and practice, are of prime importance to the commander.

● Equipment: Installation of MILES AGES on the AH-1S aircraft requires about two hours, but, in order for MILES AGES to work, weapon systems must be fully operational. MILES AGES/AD NET has identified several weaknesses in how units maintain aircraft armament systems. The units with the highest AH-1S fully mission capable operational readiness rates maintain several entries in the DA Form 2408-18 in the aircraft log book concerning armament systems. Most conduct a weekly "full-up" armament check.

In addition, the built-in test procedures outlined in the aircraft "10" are accomplished on nearly every flight. If these procedures are not followed, it is likely that armament systems will be reported as fully operational when, in fact, they are not.

MILES AGES equipment on the AH-1S exercises the entire armament system. Since the Test Set, Guided Missile System (TSGMS) checks are only required during phase maintenance or 150 hours, it is necessary to run the armament systems often in order to be fully confident that everything is working properly.

● Training: Weaknesses in battle drill are clearly evident during MILES training. It appears that most units are superb at flying skills but few are good at fighting skills. Some of this is explained by the CONUS turn-over rates. With MILES AGES there is no more subjective evaluation of "who shot John?" The MILES automatic casualty assessment feature provides immediate feedback to this question and, further, highlights how good unit tactics and techniques really are.

We are just beginning to see the positive effect that MILES AGES/AD can have on Army Aviation. It is clear that the fielding of AGES/AD will have a profound influence on aviation tactics and doctrine and allows aviation units to learn the lessons of combat in a peacetime environment.

In the field. In any terrain. In any climate. In any weather. Our Intermediate Forward Test Equipment (IFTE) is a product of our four-year Systems X research and development program for next generation automatic test systems.

IFTE is designed to quickly pinpoint problems in missile, combat vehicle, aviation, C² and signal intelligence systems to minimize downtime, and return them to action.

At Grumman, we build test systems as if we were the soldiers depending on them in combat. And we bring to our design more than 25 years of experience in providing affordable and supportable test systems.

Add to this Raytheon's expertise in fielding and supporting sophisticated army weapon systems and you have a high quality, dependable supplier.

Keeping pace with history

A Progress Report by Howard E. Brown, Director of Development, Army Aviation Museum Foundation

IN our fast paced world of rapid technological change we are inclined to overlook many of the historical developments which have shaped our lives and professional careers and those that will affect our future. Such has been the case with Army Aviation.

As the Army's newest branch, Army Aviation is making such rapid strides that many innovations being implemented are flashing by with little or no historical consideration. Today, the Branch is being called upon to respond to the needs of the air-land battle as a full-fledged member of the combined arms team.

An historic mission

Army Aviation was born of an opportune union between battlefield need and technology. From its humble beginning in World War II, through Korea and Vietnam, Army Aviation has forged a proud and glorious heritage. But what about our past, present and future achievements? Will they pass unnoticed, or will a record of these historic accomplishments be preserved for subsequent generations?

To ensure their preservation, the U.S. Army Aviation Museum at Fort Rucker, Alabama, was established. Its mission is to collect, preserve and display aircraft, memorabilia and artifacts which tell the story of Army Aviation. The museum serves as the repository for items contributing to the history of Army Aviation and as the source of educational and historical facts. It is used as an extension of the training facilities of the U.S. Army Aviation School and as a source of morale and esprit for the Aviation Branch. It serves as a place of recognition of units and individuals of distinction in Army Aviation history.

Since the museum opened to the public in 1955, the collection of aviation equipment, displays and exhibits has grown to its present value of $75 million and is increasing monthly.

OPPOSITE: A model of the planned Museum facility.

These exhibits, collected over the past thirty years, make up the world's largest collection of helicopters and contain practically every type of Army fixed-wing aircraft. The museum has a total of 145 aircraft and two balloons in the current collection. Of these, 66 are sheltered, 35 are on display outside, 18 are on loan to other museums and 26 are in repair or storage. The latest acquisition is a prototype AH-64 Apache.

The museum collection is not just planes and helicopters, however. It also has a reference library containing more than 1,800 documents, books and manuals, and more than 2,000 photographs. The materials are used by the museum staff for authentic restoration and preservation of the aircraft collection and memorabilia. Writers and researchers, both military and civilian, who are interested in the factual history of Army Aviation and the aircraft are encouraged to use these valuable sources of information. This historical point of interest, which is one of the top ten tourist attractions in the State of Alabama, is open every day of the year except Christmas and admission is free.

All of our irreplaceable collection is presently stored within the confines of three World War II shop buildings. The lack of space, along with insufficient environmental and fire protection, presents a serious problem. Sixty-five percent of the displays and artifacts are in storage due to the lack of display areas. We have a truly magnificent collection and nowhere to properly display it!

A permanent home

Since government funds are unavailable for the construction of military museums, the Army Aviation Museum Foundation has been organized to raise the $2.5 million necessary to construct a modern facility. Through the hard work and generosity of many people we have recently passed the $1.5 million mark in cash and pledges and are moving toward the initial construction phase. The final design plans have been forwarded to the Training and Doctrine Command for approval. The Foundation Board of Directors has voted to begin construction in increments with the monies available. The first increment is scheduled to begin this year pending final approval by the Secretary of the Army.

Since the 1985 AAAA Convention in St. Louis, the following industry members have contributed a total of $104,735 to the Army Aviation Museum Foundation building fund:

Sikorsky Aircraft.....	$35,000*
Avco Lycoming.....	20,000*
Boeing Vertol.....	10,000*
Northrop Corporation.....	10,000
Martin Marietta.....	10,000
Singer company.....	5,000*
Rockwell International.....	5,000
Hughes Helicopters.....	2,500*
ITT Avionics Division.....	2,000
Cobro Corporation.....	1,535*
AIL Division of Eaton.....	1,500
Canadian Marconi.....	1,200*
Embry Riddle.....	500*
Litton Guidance & Control Systems.....	500

* Donated at the AAAA Convention.

The new facility will be located on the Main Post of Fort Rucker adjacent to the present museum. It will have approximately 74,800 square feet of usable area and a parking lot to accommodate 100 vehicles and four large buses. The museum will be a permanent facility with steel frame construction and concrete slabs with pre-engineered wall panels. It will be sprinkled for fire protection and will include administrative areas and public circulation for viewing of the museum displays. The museum will be an impressive, functional structure which will do justice to the proud heritage of the Army Aviation Branch. It will be a legacy of the past for those who follow.

The first construction increment will include the entrance, 40,000 square feet of aircraft display area, a gift shop and parking lot. The second increment which includes additional display areas and administrative and support facilities will be constructed as funds become available. After the building is completed the Foundation will present it to the Army. The Aviation Center will continue to provide all required maintenance, utilities, and professional staffing in accordance with existing regulations.

As part of the Foundation's program for fund-raising we have identified the following categories of donor participation:

Life Memberships

Individual contributions of $100

Distinguished Memberships

Individuals contributing $500

Charter Memberships

Individual contributions of $1,000

Patron Memberships

Individual contribution of $25,000

Organization Memberships

Contribution of $100

Unit Memberships

Contribution of $500 from any detachment or company size unit

Industry Memberships

Contribution of $1,000

"In Memoriam" Sponsorships

Contribution $100. Memorialized person's name engraved on permanent plaques.

All contributions are tax deductible. Individuals contributing $100 or more will receive a Certificate of Membership in the Foundation, a set of twelve signed prints (while they last) of "The Evolution of Army Aviation," and will have their name engraved on a wall in the museum.

Our proud history

As was stated earlier, we have a truly magnificent collection of Army Aviation history and no place to properly display it. In four short decades, Army Aviation has forged a proud and glorious heritage. Such a proud heritage should not be confined to the memories of those who have participated, but should be proudly displayed for all to see, enjoy and learn from. Only through a modern museum can the illustrious story of Army Aviation be told.

The Army Aviation Museum Foundation is dedicated to accomplishing this goal, but we need your wholehearted support. If you are not a member of the Foundation, please fill out the attached form and send it in with your contribution. Even if it is not possible for you to become a Life Member the important thing is for everyone to participate at whatever level they can.

An urgent need

The Army Aviation Branch desperately needs and deserves a new museum, but our proud history will be lost to future generations if we, the Army Aviation Family, do not take the necessary action to see that it is preserved!

The many innovations being implemented in our Branch today are too important to allow them to pass unnoticed. Take a moment to consider the historical impact of your own job in Army Aviation. Your accomplishments today may well be tomorrow's history. Support the Army Aviation Museum and share its importance with your contemporaries. Remember, if we in the Army Aviation community don't support our museum, no one else will.

Hence, they lose contact with many of their old friends with whom they still wish to communicate. This listing through the SPOOF roster is a way to help.

An Automated Flying Hour Program

By Major Steve Gerhardt
and
Dr. William Lesso

ABOUT THE AUTHORS

MAJ GERHARDT, NOW AIR DEFENSE COORDINATOR AT THE BALLISTICS RESEARCH LAB, ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, MD, WAS RECENTLY A GRADUATE STUDENT WITH DR. LESSO, PROFESSOR OF THE OPERATIONS RESEARCH GROUP, DEPARTMENT OF MECHANICAL ENGINEERING, UNIVERSITY OF TEXAS, AUSTIN.

MANAGEMENT of the flying hour program has become an enormous task for most aviation units in today's U.S. Army. Numerous hours are spent multiplying and adding numbers to determine the actual status of a unit's flying hour program.

It has become extremely tedious and time consuming for the flying hour manager to determine the breakdowns and categories into which he must accurately account for flying hours.

A classic problem

Fort Hood, Texas, for example, has a large flying hour program involving a fleet of over 400 various types of aircraft. These aircraft are distributed among seven major units which are further broken down into approximately 31 subordinate units, each with direct responsibility for aircraft. These aircraft fly a total of nearly 60,000 allocated hours annually, at a total cost of approximately $14 million.

In past years, some of these units have failed to use all of the hours (funds) which were allocated to them while, at the same time, other units lacked hours (funds) to complete all of their requirements. The major problem involved a lack of feedback to the managers of the flying hours on what was actually happening in each of the units. The methods being used to facilitate control of flying hours had become outdated and ineffective.

Within the last year, efforts have been undertaken within III Corps, located at Fort Hood, to resolve the dilemma. III Corps has been looking for an efficient, effective method of providing feedback on the status of the flying hour program without creating an additional burden or extra work for their flying hour managers.

If we can improve the present methods of planning, allocating, and scheduling flying hours, and establish a method to measure or analyze how units are doing in the management of their flying hours at various points in time during the fiscal year, we then should have better control of the flying hour program and be able to successfully reallocate hours between units in a more timely and effective manner.

An automated technique

Decision-makers realized the continually improving capabilities and wide availability of the home computer or microcomputer, and the natural adaptability of microcomputers to the structural organization of Fort Hood. A spread sheet or large accounting type of software program, available today in all computer stores for all types of computers, seemed most suitable to use in the accounting and control of flying hours.

Visicalc, one of these commercial software programs, has 64 columns and 254 rows available for data entry when used as a spread sheet. This program allows the user to formulate row and column entries appropriate to his particular situation. The Visicalc program allows the user to easily input labels (names), numbers, and numerical functions involving multiplication, division, addition, and subtraction. It does not require a computer expert to input data or make changes when deemed necessary.

So, microcomputers, using the Visicalc software program, have been implemented at Fort Hood to account for flying hours and funds. All that's required for a total analysis of a unit's flying hour program is to input the hours completed per type of aircraft on a weekly basis. The Visicalc program automatically computes yearly and quarterly totals from the weekly input. These totals can be compared to the yearly and quarterly hours which have been previously scheduled or programmed.

The last three rows of the Fort Hood program give summed totals for specific aircraft, or provide a roll-up of earlier row entries. This information has been used for direct input into the quarterly 503-R report which has also been automated using Visicalc. Similar programs have been established for all aviation units located on Fort Hood to aid in the effective planning, scheduling, reviewing, and adjusting of the allocated flying hours.

An additional aspect to be considered at Fort Hood involved the Department of the Army's hourly cost tables for aircraft. This data was also placed into a Visicalc spread sheet and can now be used in a manner which allows the microcomputer to determine the total costs of flying hours consumed by aviation units.

Value earned

The final idea developed in this project and implemented in each of the weekly and monthly models is the concept of "value earned". This concept is found in the last two columns in each of the Fort Hood programs which are labeled "estimated hours to complete in quarter" and "anticipated hours". Value Earned is a means to measure actual flying hours completed, compared to planned and/or scheduled flying hours.

This concept can be used to analyze the overall completion status of the flying hour program in an aviation unit, and it allows the units on Fort Hood to determine at any point in time if they are over or under their budgeted flying hours and, additionally, if they are ahead or behind their previously planned schedule of usage.

The Value Earned concept can aid and assist the flying hour manager in determining his actual standing. This concept alerts us to problems that may be developing and indicates when reallocation of flying hours between units may be necessary.

Summary

Automation of the flying hour program through the use of Visicalc on microcomputers, utilizing the Value Earned concept, results in almost instantaneous feedback on the status of a unit's flying hour program. The automated technique is within the present Army reporting standards and creates no additional burden on the user.

Once implemented, the automated technique significantly reduces the time and effort required to manage a flying hour program. The costs involved in implementing such a system are minimal since many units already have microcomputers with Visicalc software programs somewhere within the unit.

Finally, the automated system involving Visicalc is easily adapted to meet changing situations and does not require a computer expert to keep things current. ■■■■

LONG RANGE MISSION — The fifth AH-64 APACHE helicopter to arrive at Fort Rucker, AL, touched down after a non-stop flight of 842 miles from Lubbock, TX. This flight marked the Army's first use of the extended range fuel system, a set of four externally mounted 230 gallon fuel tanks, which will allow the aircraft to self-deploy from the U.S. to Europe by making long hops across the Atlantic Ocean via Canada, Greenland, Iceland, and England. CW4 Robert Sullivan was pilot for this mission. The co-pilot for the flight was the APACHE program manager, MG Charles F. Drenz.

BOEING — SIKORSKY LHX TEAM

The Boeing Company's Vertol division and United Technologies' Sikorsky Aircraft division signed a Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) at the Paris Air Show last month to jointly bid to develop the U.S. Army's new light helicopter — the LHX. The MOU states that both companies will establish a business relationship to develop and produce a small, high speed, agile, and highly advanced helicopter in the 8,000 pound class.

The Boeing Military Aircraft Company, which has extensive experience in electronic systems integration on a number of military programs, including the B-1 and B-52 bombers and cruise missiles, will be responsible for LHX avionics integration.

OCS HALL OF FAME — Colonel Samuel A. Sunby, a veteran Army Aviator now retired, has been inducted into the Infantry OCS Hall of Fame, Fort Benning, GA. He was the first officer inducted into the Hall who graduated from the Officer Candidate School established in France toward the end of World War II.

BLACK HAWKS FLYING AGAIN

Elements of the Army's fleet of UH-60A BLACK HAWK helicopters have returned to flight status following an investigation of two accidents which led to the fleet's grounding last April. The investigations indicated that the absence of a bolt in the flight control mixer assembly was responsible for the first accident at Fort Bragg, NC. However, total destruction of the aircraft involved precluded conclusive findings. A painstaking inspection of the entire fleet found that no other aircraft is missing this bolt.

The second accident, at Fort Rucker, AL, was caused by the failure of a main rotor blade spindle. The Army and Sikorsky Aircraft have now developed a load-sharing tie rod which will preclude further spindle failure. Joint Army-Sikorsky teams will be visiting BLACK HAWK units worldwide to inspect and repair each aircraft by installing this new assembly. This effort began last month at Fort Rucker, and operational employment of the BLACK HAWK will be restored as soon as this work is completed.

While their technology's on paper, ours is in the air. With a 10 year and 3 million hour headstart.

While other helicopter manufacturers are still in the planning stages of a major breakthrough — we're flying ours.

Putting Aerospatiale on the cutting edge of composite materials technology took a lot of hard work. But it paid off. Now we're not only able to offer you the proven technology you need today, we're able to save you time and money on research and development.

This could mean millions of dollars. Now consider the advantages:

Our fourth generation composite rotor blades. They're significantly lighter than conventional blades and capable of flying at 200 plus knots.

Our advanced starflex rotor head. It's the industry's only all-composite rotor head, made up of 70% fewer parts and 60% less weight than conventional rotor heads. And bearings that require no lubrication.

Our vibration dampening systems. With this new technology we're able to dampen the vibration that can occur when you hit 200kts. This is no small feat.

Our fenestron, the original shrouded tail rotor.

Designed to increase safety while reducing maintenance. The fan-in-fin design also increases performance. After ten years, it's a proven success and the only one of its kind.

Our advanced flight management integration. This ability prompted the U.S. Coast Guard to choose Aerospatiale's Dauphin 2 to form the foundation of their new SRR aircraft — the HH65A Dolphin.

Those are the facts, now consider the bottom line. Aerospatiale is an approved government contractor. And we're ready to supply you with the proven technology the others are just talking about. It's up to you. Would you rather spend millions on talk — or technology?

A DISTINGUISHED CAREER — Command Sergeant Major James K. Brock, the Army Aviation Association of America's "Aviation Soldier of the Year" back in 1962, is now retiring from the Army after 30 years of distinguished service. His latest assignment has been to serve as as Command Sergeant Major for the U.S. Army Aviation Systems Command in St. Louis, MO, where he will be succeeded by CSM John T. Pate who is transferring to AVSCOM from his post at Yuma Proving Grounds, AZ.

NEWEST ARMY ASTRONAUT — Captain Charles D. Gemar has become Army Aviation's newest addition to the NASA astronaut mission specialist force. He is currently completing a rotary wing refresher training course at the Army Aviation Center and will begin his NASA tour in August. He joins Colonel Robert L. Stewart, Lieutenant Colonel Sherwood Spring, and Major James Adamson as the fourth Army officer to be selected by NASA for the nation's space program. All are Army Aviators.

From concept to reality:
the single-pilot cockpit.

A systems integration milestone on the road to LHX. The ultimate simulator: a unique flying test bed that will demonstrate, in the air, technology developed by the Sikorsky team in the lab.

The goal: reduced pilot workload, so that one operator can fly day/night, all-weather, nap-of-earth missions.
